Says '6' Will Get Britain Moving

LONDON, July 8 (Reuters).— Prime Minister Edward Heath to-night urged Britain to join the Common Market and become a greater country in a greater Europe.
In a television broadcast aimed directly at "selling" the British people on the European idea, Mr. Heath said that Britain for 25 years had been looking for something to get the country moving again.

"Now here it is," he said. "We must recognize it for what it is. We have the chance for new greatness. Now we must take it." Mr. Heath spoke in short. stabling sentences—the most direct appeal he has yet made in a bid to rally opinion to the government's side. Opinion polls still show a majority of Britons dislike the idea of joining the European Community. He reviewed the entry terms reached at negotiations in Luxembourg and Brussels, describing them as a good deal better than anyone thought they were going to he.

This had been possible because the six-nation European Community felt, as Britain did, that they could achieve more together than they could apart. It would open up to member countries a market larger than the Soviet Union and larger than the United

"The future of this country be-longs to those who are young or still unborn," Mr. Heath-added.

"In reaching our decision, we must keep this in mind. "What kind of world will they have to live in? Will they ever forgive us if we take the wrong decision—the shortsighted decision?" He said an enlarged Europe would be a big factor in maintaining peace. The European Community realized after two world wars that fighting one another gained nothing.

"Many of you have fought in Europe, as I did, or have lost fathers, brother or husbands who fell fighting in Europe. I say to you now, with that experience in my memory, that joining the Community . . . is the best guarantee we can give ourselves of a lasting peace in Europe." Mr. Heath's broadcast, coming

British Suggest It Affects Certain Hormones

Light on Mystery of How Aspirin Works

By Walter Sullivan NEW YORK, July 8 (NYT).-

Although aspirin is probably the most widely used of all drugs, its mode of action within the body has defied satisfactory explanation Now. British researchers believe they have the answer. They have shown that aspirin, and its close relatives, inhibit the synthesis of hormones, known as prostaglandins, that can induce fever, inflammation and head-

These hormones, relatively recently discovered, are believed to play a wide variety of roles affecting such diverse organs as the heart, bronchiai tubes, uterus, blood vessels and stomach. Tha possibility of their cootrol with aspirin-like drugs has evoked considerable excitement in the British medical community.

A British journal, the New Scientist, refers to the finding, in its June 24 issue, as "an event of enormous significance." It holds out the prospect, the jourtons of TNT) at a depth of nal said, "of producing much improved drugs to deal with such intractable ailments as rheumatic

Furthermore, it added, the discovery offers bope for a better understanding of how prostagiandins function in the body. Some are being used experimentally to induce abortion and there is hope that their control. with asptrin-like drugs, could prevent unwanted abortions.

At present, aspirin-type drugs are being given in massive doses to keep body temperature down in cases of rbeumatic fever, but the development of more effective treatment has been hampered by uncertainty as to how aspirin works

The aspirin findings were reported in the June 28 issue of Nature. They are presented in three reports by researchers at the Institute of Basic Medical Sciences of the Royal College of Surgeons in London.

Other Reports "

The first report, by Dr. John J. R. Vane, professor of phar-macology, tells of studies with guinea-pig tissue showing that three aspirin-like drugs all impeda synthesis of a prostaglandin that, in cats, is the most potent wanted abortion or miscarriage."

tion of fever. One of the drugs was aspirin itself (acetylsalicylic acid). Another was indomethacin (marketed as Indocin). The third was sodium salicylate, which, in various preparations, is used to treat rheumatoid arthritis. The last-oamed was the least cffective against the particular prostaglandin used in this test. This was considered puzzling, since the drug is comparable to aspirin in controlling fever and inflammation. Indomethacin, oo the other hand, proved extremely potent in the test.

Dr. Vane, with Dr. Sergio H. Ferreira and Dr. Salvador Moncada, tell in a second report that aspirin and indomethacin block prostaglandin release by an intact organ. In a third report, researchers found that platelets in the blood of those who had taken aspirin could not produce prostaglandins.

In assessing the implications of these findings, Dr. Vane suggested the possible use of an anti-inflammatory acid, such as aspirin, "as an inhibitor of un-

LAKENHEATH, England, July 8 (NYT),-The United States Air Force opened court-martial pro-ceedings today against Capt. Thomas S. Culver, the first American officer accused of taking part in an anti-war protest in Britain:

Moments after the court-martial began on this sprawling Suffolk air base, Capt. Culver's attorneys pressed the court to drop charges against the Long Island-born officer. They contended that military regulations barring demonstrations overseas by servicemen were illegal.

"This is a test case," said Edward Sherman, a civilian lawyer representing Capt. Culver at the request of the American Civil Libertles Union. "So far as we know this is the first time that this regulation has been testedthe regulation that prohibits off-duty servicemen in foreign countries from taking part in demonstrations.

Outside the courtroom during the lunch break, Mr. Sherman, a professor at the University of Indiana law school, said:

"We believe the regulation is unconstitutional because it violates a serviceman's right to free speech. We view this as a key case on servicemen's rights."

The judge, Col. Carl R. Abrams, rejected Mr. Sherman's motions, Saigon Units but lawyers for Capt. Culver made clear that the issues in the case may eventually be taken to the Supreme Court.

Protest at Embassy

Capt. Culver and 300 other servicemen took part in the silent anti-war protest outside the U.S. Embassy on May 31. During the protest Capt. Culver-the senior officer there-and the other servicemen presented anti-war petitions with 1,000 signatures at the embassy.

The following week, on the eve of his departure for the United States and discharge, he was taken from his Cambridge apartment and placed under restriction at the air base.

The Air Force says that Capt. Culver "solicited other military personnel" to take part in the protest and violated regulations that forbid demonstrations by servicemen overseas. The 32-yearold officer faces four years imprisonment, forfeiture of pay and a dishonorable discharge.

In a long motion that drew praise from Col. last Friday.

During the weekend, the protesters collected 1,300 signatures from visitors to the Forum, including foreign tourists, who declared that they were against the "sound-and-light" show.

"The main reason for our stand is the rtfer bad taste of the show held in the most important archaeological monument in the world," a young archaeologist

Scientific Backing

The protesters have scientific hacking for their campaign. A commission from the Education Ministry, which recently inspected the technical apparatus of the show, is said to have reported that the vibrations caused by the sounds were seriously endangering some of the oldest ruins. It was also said that the underground Etruscan sewage system has already been damaged by the rivets fixing cables onto the ruins. This could cause a collapse of the Last year, the show was halted for several months when another commission found serious cracks in the palace of the Emperor Tiberius, which stands on the Palatine Hill on the edge of the Forum behind the seating area. It was reported that the house was progressively inclining toward the Forum. The cracks were said to be due to either the vibrations caused by the loudspeakers tract could continue until it ex-installed for the show or to bad pired next year—despite the rerestoration work carried out previously on the imperial house.

The superintendent of fine arts for Rome Province had the seats removed. This year, spectators had to sit in the Julian Basilica. Mario Fantini, the hear of the private company that holds the 'sound-and-light" concession declared last night in an interview: The Education Ministry's commission has said I've caused last-Ing damage with my rivets and cables hut it's too late. It wouldn't help matters if we removed the equipment now."

The show sells about 700 tickets at $2.50 each nightly throughout the summer season, which lasts until mid-October. However, the concessionaire must share his profits with the main travel agencies in Rome that sell the tickets. Nixon Invoked

Mr. Fantini defends his show hy stating that President Richard Nixon saw it during one of his visits to Rome several years ago and "greatly admired lt." "Mr. Nixon has the record of the sounds and lights in his private collection," Mr. Fantini Government officials, deputies

Gen. Diez Alegria, who has a reputation for moderate political views, told the Defense Commission last night that they had made the law so tough that it was unacceptable.

Labor Truce In Italy Ends Strike Wave

But New Walkouts Are Due Next Week

ROME, July 8 (UPI)-Coal miners and some civil servants stayed away from work today, but a series of summer strikes was coming slowly to a halt. Thousands of tourists were the big-gest winners in a truce between management and labor.

Employees of 1,327 hotels in Rome ended a seven-day strike yesterday at midnight. Tourist officials said the strike cost the city heavily in tourist revenue. The three major labor unions refused to join in a strike at the Rome railway terminal and train services were only slightly disrupted in a walkout hy a few dozen workers.

Coal miners staged a 24-hour strike over pay and working conditions and employees at the Ministry of Defense went into the final day of a strike over job reform and pay.

No violence was reported in the lingering labor agitation, but students clashed in a Rome street. The police said four per-sons were burt. The fighting was attributed to a continuing student battle over control of a residence house.

The nation's 220,000 hotel employees, as well as several thousand other workers, were under laws which allow is peated jail sentences for the same ofscheduled to strike again next week unless new contracts are negotiated before then. But some labor leaders said many strikes might he postponed because they conflict with vacations usually taken in late July and Angust.

The hotel strikes are scheduled to resume July 12, 13 and 14 throughout the country with workers pressing claims for more money, a shorter work week and

The strike at Rome's railway station was called for 96 hours, with many of the station's 1,800 workers planning to stay away from work for three hours each

Workers are seeking a reduction of the working week from 42 to 36 hours, bonus payments for the busier summer season and safer job conditions. Unions said two men have died and 111 were injured at the station during the last two years.

to be interrupted.

Mr. School spent a further hour with Mrs. Meir. Afterward. he said that he had a clearer picture of the Middle East

After a quick tonr of the Knes set (parlisment) building, Mr. Scheel moved on to his second round of talks with Foreign Tonight, Mr. Scheel and his wife were to giva a dinner for Israeli officials.

Although there have been no major demonstrations, one anti-German incident occurred this afternoon. Outside the Jerusalem City Hall, police arrested a youth who tried to burn a Nazi flag atop an automobile carrying Mr Scheel. The car was also pelted

"German killer, German kill-ers," a small crowd of demonstrators chanted.

In a front-page editorial, the English-language Jerusalem Poet said that Germany still owes a debt to the Jews and it has to be pald.

It said that the term "normalization" could never be applied to relations between Germans and Jews. It said that Israel has a right to insist that special relations must exist and spelled these out as "this means that Israel should ask and should receive preferential treatment in the political, economic and secority spheres."

An opposition member of parllament, Shaul Tamir, also requested Mr. Eban to raise with Mr. Scheel the question of former Nazis serving in tha West German administration.

Inna A. Armand, 73, a Child Of the Russian Revolution

MOSCOW, July 8 (NYT).-Inns A. Armand, 73, a virtual child of the Russian revolution. whose mother was one of Lenin's closest comrades, died on Tuesday after a serious illness, it was reported today.

Her mother, Inessa Armand, was one of the leading woman Bolsheviks, an intimate friend of both Lenin and his wife Nadezhds. K. Krupskaya, and whose views on free love clashed with Lenin's puritanism. After Inessa Armand died from cholers in 1920, Lenin and his wife served as guardians for Inna Armand.

Embned with the enthusiasm of the first days after the Bolshevik revolution in 1917, Miss Armand, then 19 years old, became one of the first leaders of the Young Communist League (Komsomol). She was known to Lenin as "little Inessa" to dis-tinguish her from her mother. In a later memoir about Lenin, Miss Armand said that once in

Suharto's Party Obtains 89% of Parliament Seats

DJAKARTA July 8 (UPI) .--The government of President Suharto will control at least 80 percent of the 460-member par-liament when the legislative as-sembly meets in October, latest election returns showed today.

This would be double the present strength of the government and military factions in parliament-and more than Mr. Suharto had expected.

Incomplete results of last Sat-urday's parliamentary elections the first since 1955-indicated that the government - backed Goikar party won more than 60 percent of all votes cast. With the 100 seats (21 percent) already reserved for the military in parliament, the government should control more than 80 percent of the house seats.

Mr. Suharto's government originally hoped for a simple major-ity in parliament and hoped to overcome minor obstacles from opposition parties through persuasive techniques. There will be only two or three opposition factions in the future parliament.
and together they will provide

THIS IS the eleventh article in the International Herald Tribune of The New York Times series on a secret study made in the Pentagon of American participation in the Vietnam war. The study was prepared in 1967-68 by a large team of authors. It consists of 3,000 pages of analysis and 4,000 pages of supporting documents and covers nearly three decades of American policy toward Southeast Asia.

ed expansion of the air war and of the ground war in the South. Beginning in late 1966, the study relates, President Johnson was being urged by the military leaders to step up the air war sharply and to consider allied invasions of Lacs, Cambodia and even North Vietnam. Repeatedly the President was pressed to mobilize reserves to provide the manpower for a larger war. The military leaders reacted to Secretary McNamara's proposals for a reduction of the air war with what the study calls "the stiffest kind of condemnation" and they "bombarded" him with rebuttals. According to the study, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joints Chiefs of Staff, warned on May 24, 1967, that halting the bombing north of the 20th Parallel would be "an aerial Dien Blen Phu"-a reference to the disastrous French military defeat in May, 1954, just before the negotiations that ended the French Indochina war.

The Joint Chiefs, the study relates, saw an "alarming pattern" in Mr. McNamara's overall strategy—one, they declared, that would undermine the entire American war effort.

Their most vehement criticism was directed against the secretary's memorandum to President Johnson on May 19, 1967, That paper gave a discouraging picture the military situation and a pessimistic view of the American public's impatience with the war,

"The time has come for us to eliminate the ambiguities from our minimum objectives—our commitment-in Vietnam. Specifically, two principles must be articulated, and policies and actions brought in line with them: see that the people of South Vietnam are permitted to determine their own future. (2) This commitment ceases if the country ceases to help itself.

"It follows that no matter how much we might hope for some things, our commitment is not: " . . . To ensure that a particular person or group remains in power, nor that the power runs to every corner of the land though we prefer certain types and we hope their writ will run throughout South Vietnam). To guarantee that the selfchosen government is non-Communist though we believe and strongly hope it will bet, and "To insist that the independent South Vietnam remain separate from North Vietnam (though in the short run we would prefer it that way)." The material in italics and in parentheses is in the McNamara memorandum.

Acceptance of VC.Urged

Specifically, the secretary urged that in September, 1967, after the South Vietnamese presiden-tial elections, the United States "move" the Saigon government "to seek a political settlement with the non-Communist members of the NLP (National Liberation Front, or Viet Congl-to explore a cease-fire and to reach an accommodation with the non-Communist South Vietnamese who are under the VC banner, to accept them as memhers of an opposition political party, and, if necessary, to accept their individual participation in the national government-in sum, a settlement to transform the members of the VC from military opponents to political opponents." Mr. McNamara acknowledged that one obvious drawback would "the alleged impact on the reputation of the United States and of its President," hut argued that "the difficulties of this strategy are fewer and smaller than the difficulties of any other approach. President Johnson, the study recounts, preferred the middle ground of piecemeal escalation what the study calls "the slow squeeze"-to either the "sharp knock" advocated by the Joint Chiefs of Staff or the shift toward political and military accommodation favored by Mr. Mc-Namara. It is "not surprising," the Pentagon analysts remark, that the President did not adopt the Mc-Namara approach in view of his need to keep "the military on board' in any new direction for the U.C. effort in Souteast Asia." This is evidently an allusion to reports at the time that some bigh-ranking officers were in the mood to threaten resignation if the McNamara policy was Satisfying neither extreme. President Johnson "was in the uncomfortable position of being able to please neither his hawkish nor his dovisb critics with his carefully modulated middle course," the study asserts.

During the prolonged internal debate, the Pentagon account discloses, such issues as stalemate in the ground war and civilian casualties of the air war were of much more concern to some policy makers than the administration publicly acknowledged.

Press dispatches from Hauoi in late 1966 stimulated what the analysts call an "explosive debate" in public about civilian casualties. Privately, the analysts add, the Central Intelligence Agency produced a summary of the bombing in 1965 and 1966 that estimated that there had been nearly 29,000 civilian casualties in North Vietnam-a figure far higher than Hanoi itself had ever used. The study implies that the term "casualties" covered both dead and wounded,

Stalemate Concern Rises

The Pentagon study also discloses that early in 1967 the growing stalemate on the ground became a concern of high civilian officials—even, at times, of President Johnson himself.

On April 37, the study notes, the President met with Gen. Westmoreland and Gen. Wheeler. who urged him to grant Gen Westmoreland's request for 200,-000 more troops—a request the two officers repeated nearly a year later-but Mr. Johnson was

Their discussion was recorded in notes, found in Pentagon files and quoted in the study. "When we add divisions, can't the enemy add divisions?" the President asked. "If so, where does it all end?" When Gen. Westmoreland con-to match American reinforcements. President Johnson turned to the worry that Hanol might ask Communist China for heip, "At what point," he asked, "does the enemy ask for volunteers?" The only recorded reply from Gen. Westmoreland was, "That is a good question."

The real ceiling on the American commitment, the analysts suggest several times, was imposed primarily by President Johnson's refusal to be pushed by the military leaders into asking Congress to mobilize reserve forces-both former servicemen on inactive status and organized units of these servicemen.

Mobilization, the analysts assert, became the "political sound barrier" that President Johnson would not break.

For Mr. McNamara and his influential aide John T. Mc-Naughton, Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs, the first frontal challenge to the basic trend of policy came in October, 1986, and grew out of doubts that had been mounting for nearly a year.

As early as November, 1965—eight months after the American decision to intervene with ground forces—the secretary of defense warned President Johnson that the major new reinforcements he was approving could "not guaran-tee success." And in January, 1966, Mr. McNaughton, the thirdranking official in the Pentagon, voiced fear that the United States had hecome caught in "an escalating military stalemate."

McNamara Murder Plan

In mid-October, Secretary Mc-Namara returned disturbed from a trip to South Vietnam. He had been the intended target of a Viet Cong assassination squad that was discovered only a few hours before his arrivai in Saigon -a point to which he seemed to allude in his report to the President. "Full security exists nowhere," he said, "not even behind the U.S. Marines' lines and in Salgon [and] in the countryside the enemy almost completely controls the night."

The Pentagon study notes that in this Oct. 14 memorandum, Mr. McNamara for the first time recommended cutting back sharply on military requests for reinforce-

In September, 1966, Adm, U.S. Grant Sharp, commander in chief of forces in the Pacific, had pressed on behalf of Gen. Westmoreland for an increase in the projected strength of American forces in South Vietnam from 445,000 to 570,000 by the end of 1967. Actual strength was 325,000 men, and still rising. On Oct. 7, the Joint Chiefs of Staff urged v.hat the Pentagou study calls "full-blown" mobilization of 688,500 Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine reservists to help provide more troops for Vietnam and also to build up the armed forces around the world.

In his Oct. 14 memorandum, Mr. McNamara told President Johnson that he was "a little less pessimistic" than he had been a year earlier because the allied military campaign had "blunted the Communist military initiative" and prevented a total collapse in Saigon. But he went on to say that this had not produced results in what he called "the 'end products'-broken enemy morale and political achieve-ments" by the South Vietnamese Discussing Saigon's struggle to win the people's allegiance, Mr. McNamara showed none of the confidence of high American officials in the early 1960s that the mere introduction of Americans would revitalize the South Vietnamese civilian and military leadership.

"The discouraging truth," he said, "is that, as was the case in 1961 and 1963 and 1965, we have not found the formula, the catalyst, for training and inspiring them into effective action.

Longer War Vs. Big Push

Summing up the crucial drive to extend government control in the countryside, he said: "Pacification has if anything gone backward. As compared with two, or four, years ago. cnemy full-time regional forces and part-time guerrilla forces are larger; attacks, terrorism and sabotage have increased in scope and intensity; more railroads are closed and highways cut: the rice crop expected to come to market is smaller; we control little, if any, more of the population ... In essence we find ourselves... no hetter, and if anything worse

"Nor," he said, turning to the air war, "has the Rolling Thunder program of bombing the North either significantly affected infiltration or cracked the morale of Hanoi,"

The essence of Mr. McNamara's recommendations was that the United States should be "girding, openly, for a longer war" rather than pursuing what the Pentagon study terms Gen. Westmoreland's "meatgrinder" strategy of trying to kill enemy troops more rapidly than they could be replaced either by new recruits by infiltration from North Vietnam.

In his memorandum, the secretary put forward his program: . "Limit the increase in U.S. forces" in 1967 to a total of planned, and 100,000 fewer than requested by the military.

• "Install a barrier" to infiltration just south of the Demilitarized Zone astride the two Vietnams' border and jutting across the Ho Chi Minh Trail complex of enemy supply lines in the mountainous panhandle of Laos . The electronic harrier would cost roughly $1 billion.

• "Stabilize the Rolling Thunder program against the North" at the current monthly level of 13,000 sorties-individual flights by planes-because bomb the North sufficently to make a radical impact upon Hanoi's political, economic and social structure would require an effort which we could make but which would not be stomached either by our own people or hy world opinion; and it would involve a serious risk of drawing us into open war with China.

• "Pursue a vigorous pacification program" that would require "drastic reform" in the approach of South Vietnamese civilian, police and military officials to insure that they "will 'stay' in the [contested] area... behave them-selves decently and ... show some respect for the people." · Take steps to increase the credibility of our peace gestures in the minds of the enemy through both political and military moves.

Among these moves, he proposed that "we should consider" a decision to "stop bombing all of North Vietnam" or, alternatively. to "shift the weight-of-effort away from 'Zones 6A and 6B'zones including Hanoi and Haiphong and areas north of those two citles to the Chinese border and concentrate the air war instead "on the infiltration routes in Zones 1 and 2 (the southern end of North Vietnam, including the Mugia Pass), in Laos and in South Vietnam." The parenthetical material is Mr. Mc-Namara's.

Politically, he suggested consideration of efforts to "try to split the VC off from Hanoi" and to "develop a realistic plan pro-viding a role for the VC in negotiations, postwar life and government of the nation,"

Sen. Kennedy Urges Accord The public position of the Johnson administration opposed negotiating with the Viet Cong or recognizing them. A proposal for political compromise from Sen. Robert F. Kennedy on Feb. 19, 1966-that the Viet Cong should be admitted "to a share of power and responsibility" in Saigon-had been quickly denounced by Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey. That, Mr. Humphrey said, would be like putting 470,000 men-25,000 more than "a fox in a chicken coop; soon there wouldn't be any chickens

Mr. McNamara was skeptical that any approach would work rapidly. "The prognosis is bad that the war can be brought to a satisfactory conclusion within the next two years," he told President Johnson in his memoran-dum. "The large-unit operations probably will not do it; negotiations probably will not do it."

There are no indications that other agencies of government were called upon to comment formally, although the McNamara report did receive general endorsement from Under Secretary of State Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, who had gone with the secretary of defense to Saigon. A note at the end of Mr. Mc-Namara's paper stated: "Mr. Katzenbach and I have discussed many of its main conclusions and recommendations—in general, hut not in particulars, it expresses his views as well as my own." The reaction of the Joint Chiefs of etaff to Mr. McNamara's proposals of Oct, 14, the Pentagon study reports, was "predictably rapid—and violent." Obviously forewarned, the Joint Chlefs had their own memorandum ready on the same day for Mr. McNamara and the President.

Their paper, quoted at length in the Pentagon study, agreed that a long war was likely but took issue with Mr. McNamara's guarded assessment of the military situation, which, in their eyes, had "improved substantially over the past year." They wera especially concerned that the Mc-Namara paper did not take into account what they called the "adverse impact over time of continued bloody defeats on the morate of VC/N.V.A. [Viet Cong/ North Vietnamese Armyl forces and the determination of their political and military leaders."
The Joint Chiefs objected to Mr.

McNamara's suggestion of a halt or a cutback in bombing to stimulate negotiations. The bombing, they argued, was a "trump card" that should not he surrendered without an equivalent return, such as "an end to the NVN aggression in SVN." Rather thau cutting back or leveling off, they advocated a "sharp knock" against North Vietnamese military assets and war-supporting facilities.

Whatever the "political merits" of slowly increasing the pressurc, they said:

"We deprived ourselves of the military effects of early weight of effort and shock, and gave to the enemy time to adjust to our slow quantitative and qualitative increase of pressure. This is not to say that it is now too late to derive military benefits from more effective and extensive use of our air and naval superiority."

Unacceptable, But...

Ambassador Bruce has rejected the North Vietnamese proposals for American withdrawal as "unacceptable"-but open to further exploration. This constitutes definite movement in the long-stalled Paris talks, and it comes, on the face of it, from Hanoi'e mitiative. Nevertheless, the form that initiative has taken is an obvious reaction to the trend of discussions in the United States. For the first time the other side has adopted the policy of building a golden bridge for the departure of American troops, and tailored its demands to those of highly articulate elements in Congress and in American nublic opinion

A majority of the U.S. Senate has already called on the administration to set a definite date for the pull-out of American troops, and linked it to the roloase of American prisoners of war. This issue is congressionally tangled-unfortunately, on eevoral counts—with the extension of the draft law. But Hanoi has offered to free its American prisoners in return for a commitment by the United States to have its forces out of Vietnam by a specific time. It has suggested-although whether this was actually incorporated in formal presentations is unclear—that discussions of this arrangement could take place apart from the political issues between Hanoi and Saigon.

The big question, however, is whether the two subjects are separable. For many in the United States, the sole real point is to extract the American soldiers—including the prisoners. For the administration, there is also the goal for which the war, presumably, was fought; to give South Vietnam the ability to express a free choice as to its future

Hanol does not want to deal with the present regime of Presidient Thieu. Unless the United States dictates some kind of coalition government (with the "other side" represented, obviously by those who have voted with bullets rather than ballots) the civil war is to continue. And if the Americans extract themselves, can any non-Communist government persist in Saigon, or can thore be any guarantee of reasonably free elections?

This is what must be probed in Washington, Saigon and Paris. It is a difficult problom-and not only because the prestige of the current administration is involved in finding some plausible answers to it. The military efficiency of the North Viotnamese is not, as the London Economist has pointed out, a fair gauge of the righteousness of their cause—and there are the related matters of the future of Laos and Cambodia, which were never intended (outside Hanoi) to be part of a greater North Vietnam. On the other hand, the prospect of an agreement by which American troops could be drawn back on some more stable schedule than the progress of "Vietnamization" is extremely alluring. The ensuing works will be a supremo test of statesmanship on all sides of the Southeast Asian struggle.

Britain: The Debate Begins

"Every historic choice involves challenge as well as opportunity. Her Majesty's government are convinced that the right decision for us is to accept the challenge, seize the opportunity and join the European commnnitles."

With these words, Prime Minister Heath's government has launched the most momentous national debate in Britain's postwar history. It will be momentous not alone for Britain but for Europe, the West and the world. The white paper, submitted to Parliament Wednesday, naturally puts the best possible face on terms for entry, negotiated over many months, and the advantagespolitical, economic, social, technological-of British membership.

Yet the emphasis throughout remains where in honesty, it should be: on the challenge and the long-run opportunity for Britain rather than on any possibility of immediate, spectacular benefits; on the lack of any alternative if Britain is to continue a purposeful international role; and on the grim consequences if Britain now should back off after painfully negotiating its way up to doors that the European communities have at last flung open.

For this much is certain: the terms that Geoffrey Rippon has brought back from Brussels and Luxembourg are not only the best Britain can get; they constitute Britain's last chance for many years perhaps forever-to join its friends across the Channel in the great work of building a united Europe, able to care for its own people. extend more help to struggling countries. and speak with a strong voice in world councils.

The white paper is eloquent but surely accurate in its prognosis of the effects of a British decision against entry: "In a single generation we should have renounced an imperial past and rejected a European future. Our friends everywhere would be dismayed. They would rightly be as uncertain as ourselves about our future role and place in the world."

If these points seem painfully obvious to Mr. Heath, to most of his Conservative colloagues in Commons, to the elognent band of pro-European Labor members and to the tiny Liberal party, they are under constant challenge from many sides and on many counts elsewhere in Parliament and in the country. The latest poll still shows 55 percent of the British people opposed to joining the Common Market, only 27 percent in

Mr. Heath and kindred spirits in both major parties thus have much missionary work to do if they are to obtain a comfortable majority for entry in the decisive antumn vote in Commons. Encountering unexpectedly heavy opposition in his own ranks, Mr. Hoath had to give up his hope for a decision prior to Parliament's summer recess and now will push his fight at a special Conservative conference of 4,000 party members next week. * * *

Labor will also hold a special conference next week but the only issue will be whether to come out immediately against entry, on the strength of the automatic bloc votes of anti-European trade unions, or to put off that negative action until Parliament has debated the terms. The really relevant question for Labor is whether its members in Parliament will be left free to vote their consciences or will be ordered by the whip to oppose entry.

A free vote for Labor would insure Mr. Heath an impressive bipartisan majority for entry; but it would also reveal the deep division in Labor's ranks on this historic issue. This split could be even more dramatic and damaging, however, if pro-European Laborites decided to reject the whip and vote for an objective their own party had pursued energotically while in power.

The great debate is now effectively joined with the government's white paper and it is almost inconceivable that at its close Britain would turn back from a goal songht by successive governments for ten years.

"We have managed to defeat the British in two minor campaigns when they were also fighting the French. We have defeated the Mexicans and the Spaniards who were already coming sport at the seams. We have defeated the Germans and tho Japanese when we had great allies who gave us time to get ready. How are we going to do alone?"

I wrote this in Tokyo, May 23. 1950, and later published it textually in my book, "A Long Row of Candles." The first part of the answer came rapidly-in 33 days-when North Korea invaded South Korea, Although aided by UN token forces, the United States was largely alone in repelling this invasion.

History's Trick

Our history books depict that time the smoke cleared, the North Koreans were approximately back where they had started from, even if undefeated. But then, as Voltaire wrote, history is nothing but a pack of tricks we play on the dead. There were plenty of

When Vietnam came aroundlike many of our conflicts, never officially declared—the United States was really on its own. South Korea, Thailand, Australia and New Zealand helped; but the Americans, with the shaky South Vietnamese, bore the real burden.

And this time we can't pretend to have won. We managed to develop a South Vietnamese army from what was only a flock and to give it a chance to stand on ite feet. But the United States emerges as the big loser and history books must admit thiseven if they are more objective and complote than the Pentagon's own hysterical account.

We lost the war in the Mississippi Valley, not the Mekong Valley. Successive American governments were never able to muster the necessary mass support at home. Democratic capitalism displayed all the internal divisions and self-destructive

Here the question, both political and ethical-whether a newspaper may properly receive and publish papers illegally taken from the government-merges into the question whether judges must let the would-be publisher get away with publishing by virtue of the freedom-of-the-press provision of the First Amendment.

In this case the ethical question disappeared and the political question became hopelessly simplified into whether publication would give aid and comfort to some enemy.

The solicitor general agreed that his case required him to show that publication of the Pentagon Papers would result in an immediate grave threat to the security of the United States of Justice Stewart: "However it

The chief justice, however, in his dissenting optnion did so: To me it is hardly believable that a newspaper long regarded as a great institution in American life would fall to perform one of the basic and simple duties of every citizen with respect to the discovery or possession of stolen property or secret govern-

To jump from the assertion that the papers do not belong to any public figure to tho conclusion that they do belong to all the two hundred million inhabitants of the United States violates Mr. Johnson's advice to Boswell not "to think foolishly."

The issue between the newspapers and the government became arrowed by the frenetic conduct of the case to the nature, degree, and immediacy of the dange threatened to the security of the United States and how directly it would follow from the publica-

The newspapers insisted that it must be such danger as the breaking of diplomatic relations, war, sinking of ships, attack on military units, or disclosure of war plans and weapons. The government would have included a wider range of dislocation of diplomatic negotiations relating to security. Both are practically impossible for the government to prove or judges to apply with proper regard to the complexity of the problems involved. Two of the six majority judges believed that the public interest would be harmed by publication and that there might be room for a statute to provide

A few suggestions for foture "Paris en Films" festivals. It would be amusing to see some of the many films on Paris made elsewhere-in Berlin, in Budepest, in Moscow and in Hollywood. In this category "An American in Paris" jumps to mind. And what of the Soviet "New Babylon" with its depiction of the Paris Commune; the Douglas Fairbanks 'Three Musketeers": "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" with Lon Chancy (a replica of the cathedral long lingered on the Universal City lot); The Phantom of the Opera," also with Chaney, (described by Jean Coctenu as "a baroque work") and the Maxim's passages from both "The Merry Widow" by Von Strobeim and that by Lubitsch.

Others are: the Lubitsch adap-tation of Sardou's "Divorcons" retitled after the Victor Herbert ballad. "Kiss Me Again"-the gay Paree of countless California flickers; the French Revolution of "Orphans of the Storm": "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter by Mai St. Clair with its settings modeled after the Hotel Régina across from the Louvre; the Pola Negri-Emil Jannings "Du Barry," shot at Potsdam; "Arch of Triumph" from the Remarque novel; "Dry Martini" by Harry d'Arrast with its American boulevardier and reproductions of the Ritz bar: Rex Ingram's "Scaramouche" and, above all, Charlie Chaplin's long invisible "Woman of Paris" which established Adolphie Menjou as a dress-suit comedian and dispelled the widely-held notion that a man in white tie and tails, opera clock and topper was not automatically

To the list should be added one of the most valuable documentaries on Paris ever made This is a film that Sacha Guitry shot to sell war bonds in 1916. Ever ingenious, Guitry interviewed the celebrated French artists of the day. He took shots of Rodin at work in his studio, of Anatole France writing in his sumptuous study; Monet and Renoir et their easels, Sarah Bernhardt chez elle; Guitry père making up in his dressing room; Porto-Riche at his library desk, The great dead live before ns again, animated miraculously in a few telling flashes.

the kind of unseen, hidden hand of racism as it operates in this country." The specific issues as Jordan sees them are housing, bealth, poverty, employment, hunger, both integrated education and quality education and "the whole issue of participatory democracy, which is something that clearly black people have been basically denied in this country.".

In this latter area, Mr. Jordan believes the number of elected program and the involvement of the community in the poverty and other programs are indications of the beginning of the "involvement of black and poor people in the determination of their destinies in this country."

'Indifference'

He sees a relationship between government policy and what the private sector thinks, and the reverse of that, and believes the Nixon administration policy on minorities is "one of indiffer-

"I think that indifference stems from a political attitude, a political judgement based on this (the Nixon administration) conception of what middle America, white America, the vast majority of white Americans are."

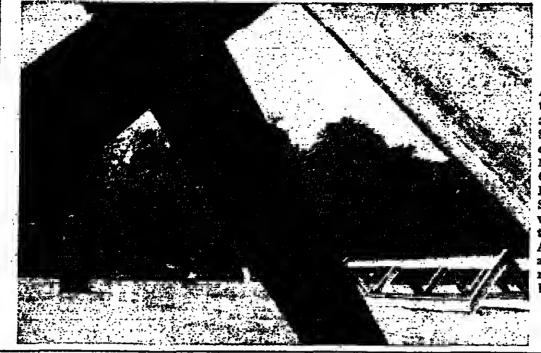

Mr. Jordan said be felt that most white Americans were committed in the 1960s "to doing away with the glaring inequities that black people were confronted with, the surface issues of racism the signs, the back of the bus, the hamburger at the corner drug store or at the five and dime

"That, I think, was offensive to the vast majority of the people in the 1960s. But I think that too few people in America did understand that that was just the beginning of the movement.. (and) now we are down to the substance of what equal opportunity is about."

On extreme elements like the Panthers, Mr. Jordan says he has no position.

This is a country where people are free to think free thoughts and I support that. It doesn't mean that I agree with them; it doesn't necessarily mean that I understand them: But I think people have a right to think what they think and say what they think ...

Entertainment in New York

NEW YORK, July 8.—This is of self-generated goodwill that how The New York Times rated new movies:

"Shaft," directed by Gordon Parks, about a black New York private eye at grips with "what seems to be virtually all the white hali of East Coast organized crime," Roger Greenspun credits with "surely the best title of any of the one-name movies to have opened in recent years." And though it doesn't have too much else of the best in his opinion-"the visual style of a Life Magazine photographie essay"—though its dramatic logic is "all Flash Gordon," it gives off "a kind

Shot in Australia, the film takes its title from an aborigine ritual in which adolescents are sent out to survive as best they can for

It so happens, says Greenspon, that most of the killing in this movie, though dreadfully brutal, makes perfect sense." When the movie "undercuts tha impulses behind its action," says the critic, "the humanitarianism on the surface begins to look cheap and the savagery beneath to seem rather

'Joy' at $3 an Ounce-

By Franz Rodriguez

Joy, the perfume that sells for $65 an ounce at Saks Fifth Avenue, now has a twin, produced by the women's liberation group at Columbia University for $3 an ounce.

It came from a readily available formula printed in Henley's "20th Century Book of Formulas. Processes and Trade Secrets," found in just about every public

The formula for the perfume that smells just like "the most expensive perfume in the world," appears on page 51B of the 1965 edition of Henley's under the name "Edelweiss"—a plant that grows freely in the Alps.

It came about this way: At a women's liberation meeting someone mentioned that various industries should be prevented from making "unconsciousbly" high profits.

Someone else brought up the cosmile-perfume industry. Still another member said she knew that the formulas for many popular cosmetics and perfumes were printed in Henley's. The book instructs its readers in the production of mocking-bird food, butter, oleomargarine, candles, casket trimmings, castor oil, chocolate, cheese, chewing gum, lozenges, ink eradicators, gun powder, nitroglycerine, dyna-mite and blasting powder.

A somewhat amusing - but

NEW YORK.—Jean Patou's lengthy—formula instructs amateur magicians in manufacturing a "wonderful bottle" from which can be poured, in succession, port wine, sherry, champagne or ink "at the will of the operator."

Two female scientists in Columbia women'a liberation agreed to work on the perfume formula. "We had a professional 'smeller' with a well trained olfactory sense. And of course, we had a bottle of the real stuff as control. The first batch contained, we all agreed, too much vetiver. So we left it completely out of the second and it turned out just

By Alan Truscott

A player who has an ace-queen combination in the opponent's suit is entitled to regard it with affection. We may be looking at two sure defensive winners. His pleasure diminishes if the appearance of the dummy makes it certain or probable that his queen is scheduled to be captured by the king.

In some cases, the queen may even prove to be a liability, as in the diagramed deal. It was played in a recent Swiss team championship.

Over East's one-space opening South might have contented him-self with a simple overcall of two hearts. As he needed a swing in the match, he took the more aggressive course of doubling with the intention of bidding hearts on the next round. North showed moderate strength by jumping to three clubs, and the result was a slightly optimistic four-heart contract.

East won his partner's spade lead with the ace, and recognized that his heart queen was likely to be worthless. He hoped that his partner had led from three spades headed by the king, in which case the heart queen could be used to score a club ruff.

The singleton club was returned, and West's ten forced dummy's king. A low trump was led. and East put up his ace and ahifted back to spades. He was disappointed when South won with the king, and became even more distressed when South cashed three rounds of diamonds, led a trump and allowed the queen to win.

East had no choice but to concede a ruff and discard. Whether he played a spade or a diamond made no difference. South could discard a club, ruff in dummy, and enter his hand with a club lead to remove West's heart jack. East would have beaten the contract if he had rid himself quickly of the beart queen. But it was certainly most difficult for him to judge that the royal lady was about to give him the kiss dose of revulsion from time to time. In this century especially, we seem to grow by continually becoming disgusted with ourselves. We fatten so fast that it takes something like an attack of dysentery to keep us in shape. And this is what dada amounted to: A crisis in the bowels of the zeitgeist. Coming of age during World War I, the dadaists were cosmic kibitzers, paranoid poets, elegant fairy godiathers of today's lumpen protesters. Though they pretended to be nihilists, most of them had the histrionic hitterness of distlinsioned lovers. Several—like Jacques Vache and René Crevel-died of broken hearts, so to speak, in committing suicide. Dada was not so much a school of art as a parodying of all schools. But, since brevity is the soul of wit, the dadaists soon exhausted their material and in the early twenties surrealism was born. Surrealism set itself the task of cleaning out the attic and the closets of the modern imagination. André Breton, tha housemother of the movement, "discovered" the unconscious while serving as a medical orderly in the war, and under his leadership the surrealists stormed it as their ancestors had stormed the Bestille Breton was himself the most sursurrealist feature of the entire movement: Totally humorless and pedantic, he had a compulsion for issuing manifestoes. He was constantly defining and redefining their position -while the surrealists as con-stantly ignored or transcended these definitions.

In spite of its posturing and politicking, surrealism was important. It helped to break the ice in European painting of the twenties. Cubism was beginning to ossify and the fauves were pretty well domesticated by that time too. Art had become increasingly autonomous, addressing itself to its own possibilities, artist and his art living as a balanced aquarium. Surrealism offered "poetic" imagery as an alternative to "pure" painting, or "painting painting." In reintroducing subject matter, it represented a left-handed sort of humanism, a going home again to personal history.

By focusing on the unconscious, the surrealists tried to turn art incide out, to disembowel it—and, in fact, this is what many of their pictures look .: like "Dada and Surrealist Art" often reads like case histories in "The Crisis of Consciousness"-a favorite slogan of the movement. The Jacklin comeback may cause shouts of surprise in the locker rooms. Tony's performance on the American circuit so far this year has been a disaster. He has missed more cups than he has made and his best showing was a seventh in the Greensboro Open. But the hitch has gone from his swing and his wedge is back on target, His form was reminiscent of his palmier days when he took the British Open in 1969 and United States Open in 1978. Jacklin had posted his score by lunch time and it was not until late afternoon that he was challenged. With a chance to tie for tile lead coming down the home hole. Lu was just short in two, grinning and doffing his cap to wester of sound. But his first put was scuffed balf way and putt three" finally toppled in from four feet. Lo was six under with his 140—a pair of 705—and con thank a 20-footer for a birdle on 17 after his little chip had gine agley off a hillock.

"Coming long way, I tried hard," Lu said. At 36, he has twice led the Far Eastern circuit and pleyed in five World Cup matches.

Nicklaus and Casper are both on 142. Jack bemused by what he considers a mediocre score in easy conditions, and that fine putter Casper frustrated with 69 putts over two days.
Yesterday it was young John O'Leary. Today another Irishman set the course on fire as Jimmy Kinsella turned the first nine with a dazzling 30 to set a course mark. With his quick swing, hit from a semi-crouob, he had five hirdles on those nine boles and the one he liked the most was a chip from 150 feet that took a big hop on the green and bounced into the sixth hole. It was that kind of a day.

Ocana Becomes Leader of Tour; Merckx Is Fifth

ORCIERES - MERLETTE, France, July 8 (Reuters).-Spain's Luis Ocena won today's 11th stage of the Tour de France to take the overall leadership of the tour.

In a superb ride, Ocana, who lives and trains in Mont-de-Marsan, France, finished the 134kilometer ride from Grenoble almost six minutes clear of secondplace finisher Van Impe of Belgium and almost nine minutes ahead of a bunch led by Belgian Eddy Merckx.

Ocana, who was second overall yesterday behind Joop Zoetemelk of Holland, now leads the Dutchman by eight minutes 43 seconds, while Van Impe jumps into tlurd place, 9 minutes 20 secondes behind the leader.

Merckx slipped to fifth place, perhaps the lowest he has been since he first rode in the Tour in 1969, 9 minutes 46 seconds behind Ocens.

Chip Oliver: Flower Child Returns to Field

By Neil Amdur

BERKELEY, Calif., July (NYT).—An attorney attempting to reach Dave Meggyesy the other day seemed surprised when Chip Oliver answered the phone at Meggyeny's home.
"You better get to work and put on some weight," the attorney said, chiding Oliver about his planned return to profes-sional football this fall. "I hope you can do it, but I hear you're not as strong as you used to

"He tried reverse psychology on me," Oliver said, recalling the episode. "He keeps trying to tell me that I couldn't come back, that it wouldn't work out. I think he feit it would make me more determined."

Oliver has a quality of persistence and stubbornness. It comes from his Zodiac, he said, the values one derives from being a double Taurus.

"I nover felt when I quit that I was a dropout," the 27-year-old Californian said. "I felt that my body was torn up from playing football for two years and that my conscioueness was not into going back at that time. "In the last year, I've grown a little bit, I've got more under-standing. I know that I can go back to that world and not become designed by it, not lose any of my manhood."

Oliver has not signed a contract with the Oakland Raiders. Madden, who appeared relieved that his flower shild had shed his shoulder length hair, if not his natural philosophy of the Now Generation.

In this latest initiation, Oliver realizes that the public attitude toward his return will be sprinkled with speculation and I-told-

TOU-50'S. "The attitude that most athletic supporters took when I dropped out, was, 'ne's a quitter,' Oliver said, over a dinner of macro burgers and chef's salad supreme at the One World Family natural food ceoter, a popular restaurant specializing in organic foods.
"Now I've got their attention. They're gonna think, 'Here comes Oliver, that quitter.' Performance is something they're not going to be able to miss."

Oliver was the Raiders' 11thround draft choice as a middle guard at the University of Southern California. He played two seasons as a left-side linebacker before joining a commune last year, a move that received more recognition and publicity than any of his performances as one of the Raiders' most consistent and underrated players.

Oliver's life style is geared toward the natural learning ex-perience. Handsome and bloeeyed, he appeared as the son-inlaw in the original pilot film of "All in the Family" and still talks about acting as an ambition. snother challenge to pursue when the vibrations so dictate, Until a few months ago, weight remained a legitimate question for his eomeback. He had dropped to 160 pounds, What pro team could afford to carry a 160-pound linebacker?

Large intakes of brewer's yeast, protein powder and sesame seeds ground into butter have strengthened Oliver's taut, muscular frame. He now weight 181 and hopee to report to Santa Rosa, the Raiders' training later this month at between 190 and 195, ideal, he said, for a free safety.

"Free safety would give me the" opportunity to manifest my desire to run, dodge and jump, to be as good as I can be," he said. It is the run, dodge and jump of football, its competitive quality, that continues to carry Oliver's impetus for the sport.
The Raiders will need experience in the secondary this season. Dave Grayson, a former all-pro, has retired. Kent Mc-Cloughan, another regular, recently was traded, perhaps an indication from Oakland officials that they consider Oliver a possible replacement.

It's Not the Money

Oliver is not coming back for the money, he said. In fact, the publishers of his forthcoming autobiography, "High for the Game" (Morrow), would prefer that he sit out this season and let the public digest the contents of his book, written with Ron Rappoport.

"By going back," he said, "by doing everything they want me to do, by going along with their program, and by watching the Raiders win almost every game, I believe I can succeed in making the public and other players see through the game.

"I'm not trying to prove to people that I'm not a quitter. Given their attitude toward me and my life style, there's going to be a certain reaction to me and the success I plan on hav-

Can Oliver succeed after painting football in such depressingly dehumanizing terms? Can he burgers, brewers yeast and yogametrics while his teammates feast on foods he distrusts, steak and potatoes? Can he find the real synthesis in the game? "I don't like to plan failures," he said. "I never failed anything I wanted to do before. I don't see why I should start failing now."

The New Tools of History

By Robert Reinhold

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. INYT. -A new scholarly publication, the Journal of Interdisciplinary History, was orga-nized last year to provide an outlet for new approaches io research: and its first three quarterly issues carry some unusuat fare for historians.

The articles include a "psychohistory" of Richard M.
Nixon, a highly statistical analysis of social mobility in Old Boston and, in the current tssue, a computer study of voting patterns in mld-Vlctorian England.

The journal is dedicated to the "cross-fertilization" of what its editors see as an inbred profession: history. As such lt represents the institutionalization of a growing trend among litistorians to borrow the increasingly precise methods and expertise of the social scientists —the psychologists, economists. political scientists, sociologists. anthropologists, demographers and others-for the solution of historical problems.

Armed with computers, a atistics, psychoanalysis, sampling lechniques, economic models and other tools of modern social science, younger historians have established a wide beachhead in the discipline that Prof C. Vann Woodward of Yale, former licad of the American Historical Association, calls "a living fossil from the pre-sclentific age." They bave come up with findings that have challenged some long-held historical assumptions.

Resistance

While some would dispute Prof. Woodward's view, history -straddling the fence between the humanities and the social sciences and clinging to its literary roots—has long resisted the inroads that rigorously objective method and quantification have made on its sister disciplines.

But this resistance is withering under the leadership of men like Sigmund Diamond of Columbia, Charles Tilly of Michigan, Stephan Thernstrom of UCLA, William O. Aydelotte of Iowa, Samuel P. Hays of Putsbergh, Lawrence Stone of Princeton, E. A. Wrigley of Cambridge, Prançois Furet of Paris, Robert Jay Lifton of Yale and others.

The new techniques have cinerged partly in response to a growing emphasis on "analyticat" history. Though most historians continue to write largely marrative, or descriptive, history, scholars today are placing growing stress on "proble u solving," on explaining the events of history and unearthing the underlying forces that have molivated men.

Though narrative historians have often engaged in intuitive analysis, much of it very cogent, many historians are secking more stringent scientific means of testing theories and rerifying conclusions.

At the same time, historians have taken a broader view of political history. There have always been historians who have dealt with polltical history as more than the episodic chronicle of kings, ministers and heroes.

But the significance of such factors as social class and mobility, urbanization, gcograplay, population growth, disease and economics as determinants of human events is now almost universally recognized.

Bloch

Historians trace this development largely to the great French historian of the 1930s Marc Bloch, a leader of the socalled "Annales" School.

Together, these developments have forced the historiano to look beyond state archives and other traditional sources to seek the aid of the social sclentists, who have built elsborate techniques and theories to explain human beliavior.

One technique gaining wide currency is prospography. or collective biography. A prospographer studying the United States Senate at any time would stiempt to interpret . actions in terms of the economic, social and even emotional background of its members as a group.

At the same time, political historians are beginning to reap benefits from the computer. At the University of Michigan, all American election results, Congressional roll calls and census data since independence have been fed into computers.

In the article on mid-Victorian voting in the current Journal of Interdisciplinary History, the author. Michael Drake of the Open University in England, argues that the nonsecret balloting of the period provides a fertile field for com-

Such quantitative methods have made their greatest im-pact on economic and political history because prices, industrial production and voting records arc easily susceptible to measurement. But the techniques have also taken firm hold in social history, and to a lesse extent, cultural and intellectual history.

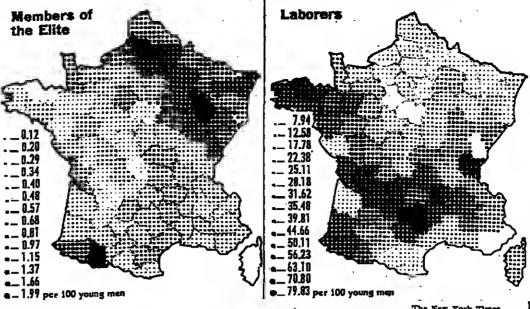

That impact has been such that some experts feel that many historians may soon by unable to read some of the new work even in their own specialties.

All are not happy about this, Prof. Carl Bridenbaugh of Brown has cautioned historians not to "worship at the shring of the bitch-goddes: QUANTI-Such is the split, in the view of Lawrence Stone of Princeton. who is using computers to study 300 years of housing patterns in England, that "there is daoger of sectarian warfare."

Interesting or not, historical questions on many fronts are coming under the scrutiny of the quantifiers. The possibilities are illustrated by the work of Prof. Emmanuel Le Roy Laduric of Paris, who has been building a social and cultural picture of early 18th-ceptury France by statistically analyzing the country's very detailed military recruitment records.

From these statistics he has drawn maps of the regional differences in occupation, height, physical defects, literacy, delinSome statistical clues to the social makeup of France. 1819-1826
